Application for:

☐ 70% SIM Scholarship: Certificate in Family Systems Theory & Application enrolment fees

☐ 50% SIM Scholarship: Family of Origin Research Group enrolment fees

This scholarship is made possible by the donation of book sale proceeds from Bowen Family Systems Theory in Christian Ministry: Grappling with theory and its application through a biblical lens. Please note that only one scholarship is awarded for each category for each year. Recipients are decided by the Systems in Ministry faculty, FSI Executive Director and the scholarship benefactor. The application criteria on the next page reflect the priorities for the scholarship, and priority will be given to those with financial hardship who have demonstrated ongoing commitment to family systems theory being applied in ministry contexts.

Please contact Lauren Errington (lerrington@thefsi.com.au) for any questions.

Application Criteria
Please complete the following sections with details about your current ministry involvement and the ways you meet the application criteria.
Current ministry context and role:
History of involvement with ministry (e.g. previous roles and contributions to ministry):
Previous engagement with FSI events / activities:
What is your particular interest in the application of family systems theory to ministry?
(Optional) Personal reasons for applying for scholarship (e.g. financial circumstances)
Scholarship recipients are expected to participate in the following FSI / SIM events in the year of their awarded scholarship and contribute in the following ways. Registration for these events is free for scholarship recipients in the year of their scholarship: • Attendance at the SIM Symposium • Presentation of a Systems in Ministry application paper at the SIM Symposium (may be the following year after the scholarship) • Support the FSI Core Programs by attending the FSI Pre-Conference event and the End-of-Year Symposium • Short written reflections on SIM activities for the purpose of promotion of Systems in Ministry activities in the future. Submission of the scholarship application form is taken as agreement to the above.
